

U.S. and Foreign Universities Fundraising In Canada

Many foreign universities understand the importance of fundraising in Canada. Many alumni who have benefited from the education they received at the foreign university are grateful to the foreign university and wish to contribute something back. Many initiatives to raise funds in Canada are initiated by the alumni here and not by the foreign university. The fundraising may be amongst alumni who live in Canada or other donors who never attended the university but for other reasons have an interest in the country or the university and its programs.

Non-Canadian universities and their alumni wishing to fundraise in Canada have various options and I will discuss them below.

1) No presence in Canada and hope that Canadians will donate funds to foreign university without a tax receipt.

This may work with smaller donations from individuals. For Corporations who do not require a tax receipt and wish to sponsor a program this may be an option. For example a Canadian resource company may sponsor a program at an African university to promote geology studies. With larger donations, individuals increasingly expect a tax receipt. Otherwise the donation is costing them a full dollar for each dollar donation rather than 56 cents on the dollar when they receive a credit. The advantage is no upfront cost and no issues of running an organization but little likelihood of receiving donations from individuals in Canada.

2) Have a Structured Relationship with a Canadian University or Charity.

The foreign university can work with Canadian universities or Canadian registered charities in a structured arrangement. Examples of such structured arrangements include an agency agreement whereby the foreign university implements a program of the Canadian university or registered charity; a joint venture agreement in which the Canadian university or charity pools certain resources with the foreign university; a cooperative partnership agreement whereby the Canadian university or charity provides some of the resources to the foreign university and the foreign university provides other resources to the project; a contractor arrangement in which case the Canadian university or charity enters into a business contract with the foreign university and receives goods or services; or an employment relationship in which a Canadian universities directly pays an employee who does work with the foreign university.

Structured arrangements are common. A Canadian university has a joint venture agreement with a foreign university and pays for part of the cost of an archaeological dig. A Canadian university contracts with a foreign university to conduct research. A Canadian university pays the salary of one of its employees who teaches for a semester or two at a foreign university.

The advantage of a structured relationship is that the Canadian university or charity is registered in Canada and therefore has to deal with the charity registration and compliance issues. The problem with the structured arrangement is that the foreign charity is dependent on Canadian partners who may or may not consistently be interested or have the same priorities.

3) Obtain Prescribed University Status (under Schedule VIII)

Schedule VIII to the Regulations of the Canadian Income Tax Act lists certain prescribed universities outside Canada, the student body of which ordinarily includes students from Canada. Donation to such a prescribed university allows corporations to deduct the donations as charitable donations and allows individuals to be eligible for a tax credit.

The Income Tax Act requires that foreign universities who will be eligible for this preferential treatment be identified by regulation and hence Schedule VIII to the regulations.

The CRA in 1998 provided an Information Letter (CIL - 1998 - 025) which set out the requirements and process to obtaining such status and they advised that:

“To become a "prescribed" university, an institution must (1) be a "university" and (2) its student body must "ordinarily" include students from Canada. Before the Department can recommend an institution for prescribed status, the institution must demonstrate that it meets these requirements by providing:

- a letter or certificate from the appropriate educational authority in the country in which the institution is located confirming that it is empowered

- to issue degrees at least at the baccalaureate level according to the academic standards and statutory definition prevailing in that country,
- a copy of recent calendar or syllabus which describes course curriculum, and
 - enrollment records for the last ten years which indicate the number of Canadian students per semester or program year, and information such as their names, Canadian addresses, and degree program.”

A "university" does not include a foundation of the university or other affiliated entity that is not the university itself.

Requests for prescribed status are to currently be sent to the CRA at the following address:

Manager, Validation Policies and Procedures Section
Assessment Reviews and Adjustments Division
Individual Returns and Payments Processing Directorate
5th Floor, Tower C
25 McArthur Avenue
Ottawa ON K1A 0L5
CANADA

The Individual Returns and Payments Processing Directorate of CRA sets out the application requirements for inclusion in Schedule VIII, and weighs applications against the legislative criteria for inclusion.

Then once the Individual Returns and Payments Processing Directorate is satisfied they send the request for inclusion to the Legislative Policy Directorate who then processes the regulatory amendment to add to the list the names of additional universities that have been found to qualify.

CRA recently advised me that “Generally, the CRA recommends foreign universities for prescribed status in early Spring each year. When Schedule VIII is amended, a notice is posted in the Canada Gazette. When a foreign university is added to Schedule VIII, it is granted prescribed status retroactive to January 1 of the year in which the application was received.”

At the bottom of this article I list the Schedule VIII prescribed foreign universities who enjoy that preferential status.

4) A prescribed university creates a representative office in Canada

Fundraising in Canada is quite competitive with 82,000 charities competing for donor attention. Just being a prescribed university and having the facility to issue tax receipts is not always adequate. Some foreign universities, whether or not prescribed, will create a representative office in Canada which is a branch of the foreign entity and not a separate legal entity. There is a requirement for extra provincial registration if an office is being established in Ontario and other provinces.

5) A prescribed university creates a Non-Profit in Canada

A separate incorporated legal entity can facilitate fundraising in Canada, however, it cannot issue tax receipts – only the foreign university can do this. The advantage of this separate entity is limited liability and also creating a presence in Canada which will hopefully be meaningful and long lasting and support fundraising. By having directors and members the hope is that they will take ownership of the initiative.

6) Set up an Canadian Friends organization to issue tax receipts and fundraise

This is similar to option #5 above, however, once the non-profit corporation is set up it can then obtain charitable status. The “Canadian Friends” of the foreign university can issue tax receipts. This works particularly well when the foreign university is not entitled to be considered a prescribed university because it does not have ordinarily have Canadian students. Additionally the Canadian Friends organization may have a mission and objects which are far broader than just fundraising for the foreign university and may include networking amongst alumni, educational programs in Canada, etc.

There are many exciting fundraising opportunities for foreign universities in Canada. Some planning and preparation can enhance the likelihood of the foreign university receiving gifts from Canadian individuals, charities and corporations.
